Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Misra digitally signs the license pack and sends it to the requesting server, using encryption, inherently comprises making the key for decryption available to the recipient, whether it is using public key, where the sender would use the recipient's public key or secret key encryption, where both parties would have had to agree to a key, it is irrelevant, since the system of Misra sends and receives encryption information and thus anticipates the broad claim language. Applicant's arguments are not persuasive. Furthermore, Misra teaches managing licenses, which includes keeping track of licenses issued, etc (cols 4-5).
